Niles Library Board commissioner Marty Hodes told us Tuesday the deficit in the district could be eliminated in 2 years by holding expenses down.

Last week our reporter, Roseann Dalmaso, wrote the library district has a total deficit of $141,471.76 for the period

Marty said the Board in past years approved $210,000 in expenditures for land alongside the present building, as well as money used for paving the new parking lot and also for a new roof. This money came from the general fund without seeking any tax boost from residents. He felt these costs resulted in the Hodes said the library district now collects $575,000 from taxes. He said the 15 mills tax is presently at its maximum with an assessed valuation in the total district of $385,000,000. The total budget is $1,021,000.

Salaries for the full-time staff have been increased from $500 to $1,500 effective July 1. Hodes said these increases should place the Niles Library district on a salary par with neighboring districts of a similar size. He admitted salaries in Skokie and Evanston could not be matched by Niles' smaller

In tightening belts Marty said personnel lost by attrition are not likely to be replaced.

Summing up the last important financial news from the district, attorney Jim Orphan should be commended for his successful suit barring Glenview from taking over the Zenith property north of Niles for the next 10 years. Jim's efforts will result in the district receiving $10,000 to $15,000 annually for the next 10 years. After that period Glenview will take over the

Guides on Chicago at Niles Library

Remember the song about Chicago, that "wonderful town"? When was the last time you visited there-really visited and not simply driven to the loop for a show? Chicago, with its seminal architecture designs, its many theaters, broad musical pallatte and varied ethnic makeup, is overflowing with places to go and things to do, many of which we take for granted. Why not take some time out from residency and become a tourist for a while?

The very abundance of possibilities for exploration should first lead you to the Niles Public Library, where there are guidebooks of all kinds-such as Jory Graham's Instant Chicago. Norman Mark's Chicago, and Sally Bane's Sweet Home Chicago- to simplify things and get you started. Why guess of do what you always did when we have so much information on and book stores, suggestions for rewarding walking and biking tours, craft stores, etc. And don't forget Chicago magazine, and upto-date authority on what is going on all about town.

Incidentally, we also have material on simply living in the "Second City" - where to get legal help, finding apartments, and dealing with landlords, how to get emergency aid, and much more.

Displayed this week at the Library are books on and about Chicago, along with works by Chicago authors--Bellow, Sandburg, Royko, and others. You would by amazed how many there are, so come on in and begin making you acquaitance (of reacquaitance) with your great

"A Smiling Christ"

The man responsible for the story prefers to remain anomymous. He now lives in Des Plaines, but once he was a prison guard for many years. The jail, in which he worked, was Raiford, the Florida State prison.

THIS TRUE, inside-story concerns a convict in this prison. He is a 'lifer', convicted of a capital crime. He is a man 'nobody knows'. His name is just a number, 26752. Even his name in the prison records is believed to be an alias. He is known only as the 'old-timer'. That's what everyone, including the warden calls

According to the ex-guard, the 'old-timer', when he first came to prison as a young man, was a rough, tough, incorrigible character. He had also been a confirmed alcoholic. In the early days of his incarceration he was unruly and became involved in several prison brawls.

It was observed, too, by prison authorities and inmates alike that he never had visitors. He never posted or received mail. "He was a loner's loner," the ex-guard said, "kept to himselfeven shunned other cons. THERE WAS an air of mystery about him that increased rather than diminished as time went by. And then one day, after he had calmed down for years, it happened.

Unaided, he attempted a lone 'break'. His escape failed. But during his 'break' he put up such a fierce fight for freedom, he slugged the ex-guard, almost shattering his jaw. Clubbed almost insensible, the 'old-timer' was tossed into solitary confinement. Later, when returned to his cell he discovered the guard he had slugged was assigned to his cell

Weeks passed without incident. One day the 'old-timer' called to the guard. "Here," he said, "this is for you." He thrust a paper thru the bars.

SUSPICIOUSLY, the guard took the paper. His eyes bulged with amazement. It was a pencil sketch of the face of the Savior smiling. The picture was titled "A Smiling Christ".

The guard, himself an amateur artist, was thunderstruck both by the unusual subject and the magnificence of the craftsmanship. Tho only a pencil sketch, it was worthy of a Michael Angelo

"He told me nothing of himself except that he was once an artist," the ex-guard said. "But he told me a strange story and requested an even stranger favor."

According to the ex-guard, the 'old-timer', while in a semiconscious state in solitary, claimed he had a dream or vision in which Christ appeared for a brief fleeting moment. "It was not the Christ of sorrow as portrayed by all artists thru the ages-but a smiling Christ, insisted the 'old-timer'. "This dream or hallucination of the fleeting image so impressed him," explained the ex-guard, "that he actually begged me to help him obtain materials so he could capture it on canvas.' The guard, finally impressed by the man's sincerity and artistic talent, did, in time, with the aid of the warden (a man named Chapman) provide the 'old-timer' with materials to start pursuit

For many years the 'old-timer' has been painting portraits of Christ smiling. Recently, his four-hundreth painting was completed. All the paintings are the same, depicting in brilliant colors, a smiling Christ. The artist is never satisfied that he has caught precisely the exact image of the dream smile. He says "I shall try again.'

ART MUSEUMS, galleries, critics and affluent laymen the world over have offered large sums to the 'old-timer' for his paintings of 'A Smiling Christ'. He steadfastly refuses all offers. Instead, he has given away all of his 400 paintings to churches of all denominations, here and abroad, missions, worthy individuals, and a few to Alcohlics Anonymous.
Since people have seen his paintings or heard about him, he has been besieged with offers for his works. Currently, the list exceeds 15,000 requests. But the 'old-timer' still refuses to accept any payment. He occasionally paints a few Florida landscape scenes to secure funds for art materials to continue his strange quest, but that is all.

Not too long ago, Warden Chapman had this to say about the 'old-timer': "Whatever happened, this inmate became a changed person. The mounting mail which comes to Raiford, from people who have heard of him or seen his paintings, is evidence of the truly great contribution this lone man has made to the cause of Christianity. Even attendance at religious services here at Raiford has increased because of his great work."
When asked why he doesn't sign his paintings, the 'old-timer' replies, "I don't want people to know me—I want them to know Him, as He really is—"A Smiling Christ".

I wrote the above story many, many years ago. The 'old-timer' was pardoned. He's alive and well and now living in Niles.

Fall gardens popular that an increasing number of people are planting fall gardens. "Planting of certain vegetable can go on from early August through early September. The homeowner can then enjoy a harvest of fresh greens and other vegetables until frost -- and ' sometimes after," the farm store manager stated.

Gardeners are encouraged to plant vegetables such as early radishes, lettuce, endive, kale, beans, cress, mustard, onion sets, peas, spinach and turnips and strongly recommended Chinese Cabbage which offers greens for salads and cooking even after several frosts.

He urged/gardeners to hold

Tom Mendelson, Manager of chase next spring for fall planting Lake-Cook Farm & Garden Store to again have green table onions in at 997 Lee st., Des Plaines states a few weeks. It is impossible for garden centers to carry the supply for fall in quantity. Warm soils make for quick germination; weed and insect problems are reduced, so this makes the fall garden a real pleasure. Use of composted cattle manure will hasten quick response. It was suggested that if one errs in planting too late - no problem as only a few cents worth of seed is lost. If frost is late, one may enjoy a fine harvest. Worth the gamble.

Mendelson offered free bulletins on fall gardens to any novice or experienced gardeners. "We are pleased to be able to help our gardeners. Many have not only helped balance the food budget, but found a whole new property. But Jim's bonanza may be worth even more money to the district. The very valuable Milwaukee ave. land east of the Zenith property is likely to be developed soon which would add still more revenue to the district.

What's happening down at Niles library is a taxing district which has never been scrutinized by the public is finally falling under the public aegis. New board members are challenging former policies. A new librarian is instituting new methods. And this newspaper is reporting to the people who pay the bills what is happening with their hard-earned tax dollars. It all bodes well for the entire district.

The three new board members have been somewhat abrasive in their challenge to the older members. And while we sort of winced at the initial confrontations, the long-term effect of the clashes between the two forces bears well for

No public body should be allowed to act in a vacuum. No matter how well intended, the lack of competition between board members in presenting contrasting ideas is a hindrance to progress. Likewise, when there is not reporting of the doings of a public body, a very important element in the democratic process is lost. It's essential the public must be made aware of public doings and must react to these ac-

Lastly, even though taxpayers are seeking relief from tax spending, we're not sure Niles Library District might not be justified in seeking a tax increase. While this newspaper alone opposed the referendum for purchasing the Milwaukee ave. library building, we do believe a low-salaried poor-bookcollection district might need more tax monies to improve its basic operation. If the board can prove the district is operating with maximum economy and efficiency and still having money problems, it might be prudent for the board to seek more money from taxpayers.

In Niles the village and park districts seem to be moving along well without money problems. And school districts, while facing cut-backs, still spend about 70% of our taxbills for educating our children. It follows if all other taxing districts are not operating by minimizing services, certainly the library district deserves the same support as these other

While the operation of separate districts may be preferrable to many, the incongruity of a village with huge revenues and probably the best services in the area, while other districts within the village are straining for more money, cries out for a solution. In Morton Grove the library district is part of the village district and perhaps Niles should have considered running the library district when it first was created.

There are no solutions in this column. For you who pay the bills, this column seeks to inform you and perhaps may jostle you into taking more interest in your community. It's your money. You work hard for it and it should be spent in your best

Local girl (Florence Fisher) makes good by Ed Hanson

Don't let anyone tell you a woman can't make it in a man's world. For long before ERA and the women libbers. Florence Fisher and her husband Vince started a little bar, back in 1940.
