Deerfield Federal and Norwood Federal merge

Executives from Deerfield Federal Savings and Loan Association and Norwood Federal Savings Bank announced last week the merger conversion of the two financial institutions is now official. Consolidation of the thrifts' assets produces a $510 million stock organization, with net worth in excess of six percent.

Ecklund, President and CEO of Deerfield Federal, "the resulting partnership puts us in an even better position to deliver financial services in a more competitive manner."

Although Norwood Federal has been merged into Deerfield Federal, it will continue to operate as Norwood Federal Savings Bank, a division of Deerfield

Federal. Deerfield Federal has a history of operating conservatively and profitably - they posted earnings of $4.2 million in fiscal year 1989, a 13 percent increase over the previous year.

Norwood Federal's operating philosophy complements that of Deerfield. Although industry changes, such as FIRREA legislation, have had varying degrees of negative impact on Norwood Federal and on the thrift industry, Norwood Federal has managed to stay profitable. Net earnings for the last five years averaged $1.2 million annually, according to Donald J. Babicz, President and CEO of Norwood Federal. Future strategy includes growth to $1 billion in assets. As Ridge and Glenview. All deposits Swedish Covenant is certified are insured up to $100,000 by the key Park in 1933 when I was 8 vears old. We went down into the dugout and he introduced me to Manager Jimmy Dykes and Al Simmons and Mule Haas, who he had previously met at the Chicago Beach Hotel in Hyde Park. That was a great thrill being down in the dugout with the ballplayers.

Another time my Dad asked a baseball clown, Al Schacht, to roll a ball over to us, as we watched his act during batting practice. That ball sat on my dresser until the day I left for the army ten years later.

A lifelong friend, Merv Block, went to many Sunday afternoon games with me when we were in our preteens. One time we stood alongside the Sox dugout. When Manager Dykes went onto the field he placed his cigar on a dugout ledge. Friend Block grabbed the cigar, and stuck it up on his wall in his bedroom with the Dykes identification under the cigar.

Another time he went down to the announcer behind the homeplate screen and told him his little brother was missing. The announcer said little Buddy Besser should come down behind homeplate. When I got home from the game my mother met me at the door and asked me what I had done at the ballpark. Many friends had called her and said they heard my name called out at the park. I never realized what a closely-knit community Chicago's southside was. Another summer, another Sox game at Comiskey Park: An uncle gave me his 25-pass baseball book and I gave the o get into the game. I then passed the book through the already been used that day. He for my Dad.

confiscated the passbook and I had a problem. I marched up to the office of the park and Dorothy Comiskey was told of my dilemma with my uncle, if I didn't get back his passbook. After a motherly lecture she called down to the gate and I retrieved the passbook.

Those were memories. Memories of people.

Another friend invited me to Comiskey park to see my first nightgame. The vice president of the Sox was named Harry Grabiner. His brother was alleged to be a notorious gambler of some repute in Chicago. My friend had a passbook from Grabiner. For whatever it was worth I found out many years later my friend's father had been bondsman for Al Capone.

Not once did I mention Ruth and Gehrig and Foxx and Greenberg and Williams and Appling and Lyons and Minoso and Dick Allen. They were among the best ballplayers I have ever seen. And they gave me much pleasure. But I remember my Dad, who was a pretty good catcher in his day. And I remember my friends who were there with n. through those early years. There in Comiskey Park.

When I bought hot dogs at lunchtime I told the girl behind the counter I was buying my last hot dog at the park And while I laughed at such sentimental hogwash I wondered why I even thought about such trivia. And when a young musical group named Stix, led the singing of "Take Me Out To The Ballgame" in the 7th inning, I must admit I passgate attendant one ticket choked up a bit and felt a nostalgic tear sneaking up on me. The tear was for the link with iron fence to a friend who was the past with my friends who outside the park. When he were there at Comiskey Park tried to hand another pass to in the thirties. And it was a tear the attendant, he noticed the for "Little Buddy Besser" of number on the passbook had 55 years ago. And it was a tear
