Shermer Park may be conveyed to Chicago Jewish Federation

Niles Park District will ask for covenant on property, consideration for neighbors

The Niles Park District has asked lawyers for the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago to be present at their next meeting, Tuesday, May 17 in order to discuss the conditions that would be required to convey Shermer Park to the Federation at no cost to them.

According to Niles Park District Director Joe LoVerde, the Park Board will discuss the matter in closed session at their meeting on Tuesday. He said that they have asked the Federation to have their representatives in attendance to present evidence to the board that Shermer Park, a public recreation area since the early 1970s, may contain gravesites like those in the neighboring Kehilath Jacob Anshe Drohiczen Cemetery.

If the evidence is suggestive, LoVerde said that he would recommend that the board convey the property to the Jewish Federation without any money changing hands.

LoVerde did stress however, that before the property could be conveyed that several details would have to be worked out, such as the future use of the property.

"I would like to see a covenant on the property so that it could never be used as a future burial site," LoVerde said.

IDOT grants allow Niles to step up DUI, seatbelt patrols

The Niles Police Department announced last Friday that they have received two grants from the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) that will go towards DUI and seatbelt enforcement.

Police Dept. Public Information Officer Jim Elenz said that the money will pay for overtime associated with additional patrols specifically designed to catch intoxicated drivers and those not wearing seatbelts.

"The law allows us to make stops now for drivers that aren't wearing seatbelts," said Elenz.

Officers involved in the program will provide saturation patrols to arrest drunk drivers and write tickets to those drivers not wearing

Newly inducted Park Ridge City Council departs from custom, takes authority to appoint standing committees

Aldermen say they are only returning power to the City Council

BY ANDREW SCHNEIDER
editor@buglenewspapers.com

The new Park Ridge City Council lost no time in taking action to change the balance of powers, altering the rules governing appointments to the council's standing commissions in a special meeting last Tuesday, one day after their induction and prompting the new mayor to make comparisons to Cicero where the city council changed rules in order to strip power from an incoming mayor earlier this year.

City Council members who voted for the changes said that they were simply reclaiming the Council's legal authority to make committee appointments. However, the changes were met with a wall of resident opposition that left people standing in the vestibule and on the steps of city hall. Ald. Mark Anderson (5th), who sponsored the rules change, said that new mayor Howard Frimark packed the Council chambers with his supporters in order to pressure the Council, and that the mayor made only half-hearted attempts to restrain the rowdy crowd.

"At times the crowd got out of control and he seemed to be enjoying it," Anderson said.

The rules changes were isolated to a small portion of the mayor's appointment authority, allowing the city council only to make their own appointments to four standing committees and liaisons to other boards and commissions, but not taking away the mayor's power to make appointments to other boards

Living Wills and Durable Power of Attorney/Health Care forms easy to complete at Palliative CareCenter and Hospice Event

Terri Schiavo's life and death recently prompted a passionate public debate. But perhaps the most important lesson to learn from that tragic situation is that one must express one's end-of-life wishes to family and friends, and more important, write them down.

To that end, Palliative CareCenter & Hospice of the North

Shore (PCCHNS) invites community members to stop by its Evanston and Norwood Park offices from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday, May 18 or 10 a.m. to noon on Monday, May 23 and fill out a Five Wishes booklet, which comprises a living will and Durable Power of Attorney for Healthcare, the two elements that ensure one will receive the kind of care one wants at the end of life. Social workers will help answer questions, and snacks will be served.

"Just thinking about one's own or a loved one's death is difficult, never mind taking the time while we are so busy with living to fill out forms about it," says Dorothy Pimer Healy, PCCHNS President & CEO. "But it is crucial, and doesn't take as much time as you think."

Five Wishes is an easy-to-complete booklet that lets you say exactly how you want to be treated if you get seriously ill. Once it is signed, Five Wishes is valid in the state of Illinois, and in many other states. The booklet is published by an organization called Aging with Dignity.

You can control how you will be treated if you get seriously ill. Fill out a Five Wishes booklet. Do it for yourself and your family at one of these PCCHNS offices: Evanston, 2821 Central, Norwood Park, 6133 N. Northwest Hwy or call (847) 467-7423.

Inside Camp: What Research Tells Us about the Lives of Children

How can parents count the ways children grow and flourish at camp? Friends? New skills? Displays of self-confidence? Steps toward independence and thoughtfulness?

Philliber Research Associates teaming with the American Camp Association has just released the results of a landmark study that demonstrate the gains are remarkable—over 5,000 parents, children, and camp staff are reading their measuring sticks—growth in positive identity, social skills, physical and thinking skills, as well as the important areas of positive values and spirituality go hand-in-hand with the camp experience.

According to Peg Smith, chief executive officer of the American Camp Association, outcomes are all about research and responsibility. "These concepts of independence and discovery come into play every day as we look at ways to enhance the growth and discovery process in youth. Our research demonstrates unequivocally that with the idea behind camp and the thousands of individuals who support children in these experiences, we are unmistakably on the right track. One of the truly exciting aspects of this research is these measurable gains continue after camp ends, and the researchers confirm that length of camp session isn't a determining factor—it's camp itself," says Smith.

Leadership, adventure, making friends, confidence—all after spending time at camp.

Positive Identity: Self-Esteem Independence

"Self-esteem does not come from empty praise, but from feeling competent; from having successful experiences; from making genuine contributions."

Athens Y Camp for Boys, Georgia

Dear Y Camp Staff,

I have to admit I was very nervous about dropping George off for his first day of camp. He has never been away from home before, and I have never been without him for more than a night away at his grandparents. We read all the information from camp and felt prepared but apprehensive about the upcoming week at camp. My fears were immediately put to rest when we arrived at camp. All of the staff was very polite and energetic. Chris went out of his way to welcome us to cabin 8 and help us get settled. The week really flew by, and we got a letter from George that read, "Dear Mom and Dad, Camp is great" and that was it. When we picked him up we could immediately tell a difference in him. All the way home he talked about his cabin, the counselors, the food, and especially the new friend he made. The confidence he gained has been great. Thank you for a wonderful camp experience. We will definitely be back next year.

—Athens Y Camp Parent

Social Skills: Leadership, Friendship, Social Comfort, Peer Relationships

"I'd say that you learn mostly how to interact with different kinds of people and are open to different ideas. You learn how to cooperate well with others who share and don't share the same opinions as you."

Teo, age 14

Tumbleweed Day Camp, California

Carter began camp at age five. At first, he was truly a fish out of water. Some of the differences between Carter and the other children were very apparent, some not so apparent. Carter was an African American in a camp setting where most others campers were white. There was no father figure in Carter's life and he often displayed his anger by striking out at others—afraid of failure more than we realized. With the encouragement and patience of the counselors, Carter was able to begin talking to the staff and other campers and participate happily in camp activities. Difference took on far less importance and a sense of belonging took its place. Carter spent many summers at Tumbleweed, became expert at the ropes course and climbing wall, challenged himself in ways he never thought possible. As Carter grew up at camp, his mother asked us to make an exception so Carter would be able to participate in our CIT program over more than one session. She confirmed what all of the staff knew—that camp was a safe place for Carter where he could be himself.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNERS

This legal notice includes a list of parcels of real estate on which 2003 property taxes (that were due in 2004) are listed as delinquent and subject to sale as of April 22, 2005.

SPECIAL NOTE: Due to the legal requirements for publication of this notice of delinquencies, this list may include some properties on which the taxes have been paid after this list was prepared. It is the property owner's responsibility to determine if the taxes are paid in full.

IF YOUR PROPERTY IS LISTED IN THIS NOTICE FOR SALE OF DELINQUENT REAL ESTATE TAXES, IT IS IMPORTANT FOR YOU TO TAKE ACTION SO THAT YOUR TAXES ARE NOT SOLD. Sale of taxes will result in a lien against the property that will add, at a minimum, hundreds of dollars in fees to the amount now due. Sale of the tax and continued failure by the owner to redeem may result in the loss of property.

Under Illinois state law, the purchaser of the delinquent real estate taxes may obtain title to these properties if they are not redeemed (paid) in a timely manner. The tax sale is scheduled to begin WEDNESDAY, July 6, 2005. At the tax sale, the Cook County Collector must offer properties having delinquent real estate taxes. MILITARY MAN

Cynics would point out that the championship teams constructed by Alderson in the mid- to late-1980s were founded on the power of Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire. The questionable source of their strength, of course, since has become the center of a national scandal and created a huge credibility problem that Alderson has had to address as one of MLB's top executives.

Even the most tradition-minded of baseball people, however, couldn't help noticing another direct effect of Alderson's precepts. Baseball is wildly popular again, perhaps more than ever.

The esteem for Alderson raises irony for the Padres, too. When their partnership was in full bloom and the Padres were headed for both a World Series and a new ballpark, owner John Moores frequently touted then-CEO Larry Lucchino as a future commissioner of baseball. Lucchino effectively was chased away, eventually to make history with the Boston Red Sox, and now Moores has hired the man who for years has been presumed to be the heir apparent to Bud Selig.

"I didn't take the job in New York with that in mind," says Alderson, 57, who was Selig's point man on most major issues. "Who knows what opportunities will present themselves in the future? I just know I'm coming to San Diego with a new job in mind. I want to enhance the strong group that's already there."

Years after bringing a new math to baseball, Alderson is living with a new math as well. He has subtracted by 29 the number of clubs in his purview.

"I think it was hard for Sandy not to root for one team," says Haas. "Sandy couldn't do that with Major League Baseball. Baseball's more of a business at that end. Sandy's more of a team guy. That's the military man in him, the team-builder."

As, and there it is, perhaps the factor that ties all this together for Alderson and the Padres. They are baseball's most military-minded team, playing in one of the major leagues' most military-minded cities.

In the realm of baseball, Alderson is forever identified by his academic past, his intellect and his genteel, professorial demeanor. Before he was anything else in life, however, he was military. Between Dartmouth and Harvard, too, he was a fighting Marine.

"You don't hear him tell anybody that, and it's not his style to tell war stories," says Beane, "but Sandy's as proud of his Marine experience as anything in his life." Alderson was born to the service, in fact, as the son of an Air Force pilot. John Alderson flew in World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Bad vision kept Sandy out of the Air Force Academy, but not out of war-torn Southeast Asia, for which he volunteered.

Before he ever joined the Marines, Alderson twice went to Vietnam. Attending Dartmouth on a Navy ROTC scholarship, he somehow wangled a journalistic visa and flew from the base where his family lived in the Philippines to Saigon, where he rode in the back of a B-57 flown by his dad. The next year he returned to Vietnam for nearly a month, serving as a correspondent.

"The war was the biggest issue of the day, and I got to take a look at it myself," says Alderson. "I was inspired by what people were doing there. What I saw over there was not a deterrent."

The next time he went back, Alderson was a Marine officer and a young squad leader who had volunteered for the infantry assignment.

"My experience was not terrible in the sense of a lot of combat," says Alderson, whose visage once was used on an actual Marine poster. Pressed to reveal more about his eight-month Vietnam experience, Alderson would allow only that he spent "a little time in the jungle."

Had he not been accepted to such a prestigious and competitive law school, Alderson might still be in the Marines. Certainly, he bleeds camouflage.

"When I was with the A's and we'd go to Yuma to play the Padres, I'd go jogging along the airstrip at the MCAS," says Alderson. "I'd hang on the fence and watch the Marine jets do touch-and-goes."

AARP Seminars to be held at Summit Square in Park Ridge

In 1930 life expectancy in the United States, for both men and women, was barely 60. Today we are told that statistic has advanced to the late 70s. That's good news. The bad news is that, although we're living longer and in many cases healthier lives, many of us will need some kind of care in later life.

For some it will be long-term care, which, by the way, is not just for the old. It may come as a surprise but 43 percent of those receiving long-term care are younger than 65. For those older than 65, there is a 41 percent chance they will spend an average of 2.5 years in a nursing home. With the number of older adults increasing yearly, we all need to be aware of the care options which are available.

To explore those options, AARP is presenting two educational seminars on long-term care at Summit Square Retirement Residence at 10 N. Summit Avenue at Touhy in Park Ridge on Thursday, May 19 from 7-9 p.m. and Saturday, May 21 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Long-term care including home care, assisted living, adult day care and nursing home care represent the greatest out-of-pocket health expense faced by older Americans. None of it is currently paid by private health insurance, Medicare, Medicare supplements or HMOs.

The program will include a presentation on local and national costs of long-term care, payment options and how to plan in advance to avoid family hardships. The seminars will not sell a specific insurance product.

Seating for the seminars is limited. To register, please call 1-800-514-8305.

GUARD AGAINST IDENTITY THEFT

In an effort to thwart identity theft and financial exploitation, the Morton Grove Police Department has installed a high volume paper shredder in the Morton Grove Senior Center. Identity theft is the unauthorized use of another person's personal identifying information, such as name, address, date of birth, Social Security number or mother's maiden name. Identity thieves use this information to open phony bank accounts, obtain unauthorized credit cards, apply for car or house loans and lease apartments using your identity. The thief tries to spend as much money as possible before you become aware of the theft. Personal documents should be shredded before being put into the garbage. The Senior Center shredder is available for use by seniors every weekday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Chef Harry Presents

Absent winter's chill, it's time to fire up the grill

BY HARRY SCHWARTZ
Copley News Service

On the grill again. All winter, I just can't wait to get back on the grill again. If it has been a long, cold winter and cool, wet spring where you live, perhaps you feel the same.

It's time to remove the grill from its winter storage, clean it and get rid of any nesting critters or their webs. Remember, last year's grilled remains should not be this year's seasonings.

Finally, fuel your grill, gather groceries, call over the gang and go!

For great shrimp salad, make extra of these shrimp. Remove the tails. Chill them after they cool from grilling and toss with chopped scallops and a light coating of mayonnaise.

CAJUN GRILLED SHRIMP

1 (12-ounce) can beer
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon Cajun seasoning blend of choice
2 pounds large, cleaned tail-on shrimp
6 to 8 barbecue or kebab skewers
Melted butter, to taste
Yields 6 to 8 servings.
Place beer, garlic, soy sauce and Cajun seasoning in mixing bowl and gently stir together. Place shrimp in beer marinade and stir gently to thoroughly coat shrimp. Let stand for 30 to 60 minutes.

Skewer shrimp.

Before heating grill, spray grate with cooking spray.
On heated grill, barbecue shrimp on both sides just until cooked, about 2 minutes per side. Baste liberally with butter. Serve immediately.

Note: If using wood or bamboo skewers, soak them in water before use.

I developed this recipe for a July 4 segment on NBC's "Today Show." I added Maine crab to cream cheese and called them firecrackers. These are great appetizers around the grill.

PACKED PEPPERS

12 to 18 jalapeno peppers, or small, mild, green chiles (such as Anaheim)
16 ounces softened vegetable-cream cheese spread
1 cup cheddar cheese, grated
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon fresh garlic, minced
Yields 8 to 10 servings.
Using tip of sharp knife, slit each pepper once lengthwise and place in 3-quart pot or Dutch oven. Cover peppers with salted water and bring to a boil over high heat. As soon as water boils, drain peppers and run cold water over them to stop cooking. They should still feel rather firm. Carefully remove seeds and pulp from peppers.

Mix together cream and cheddar cheeses. Stuff each pepper only with enough cheese mixture so that they can still be closed tightly.
Mix oil and garlic and allow to stand for 5 minutes. Dip peppers in garlic oil before cooking them on hot grill.
Char both sides of peppers and, as cheese begins to peek out slits in peppers, remove to serving platter.

This is terrific as a side dish next to almost anything off the grill or served over cooked pasta or rice as an entree.

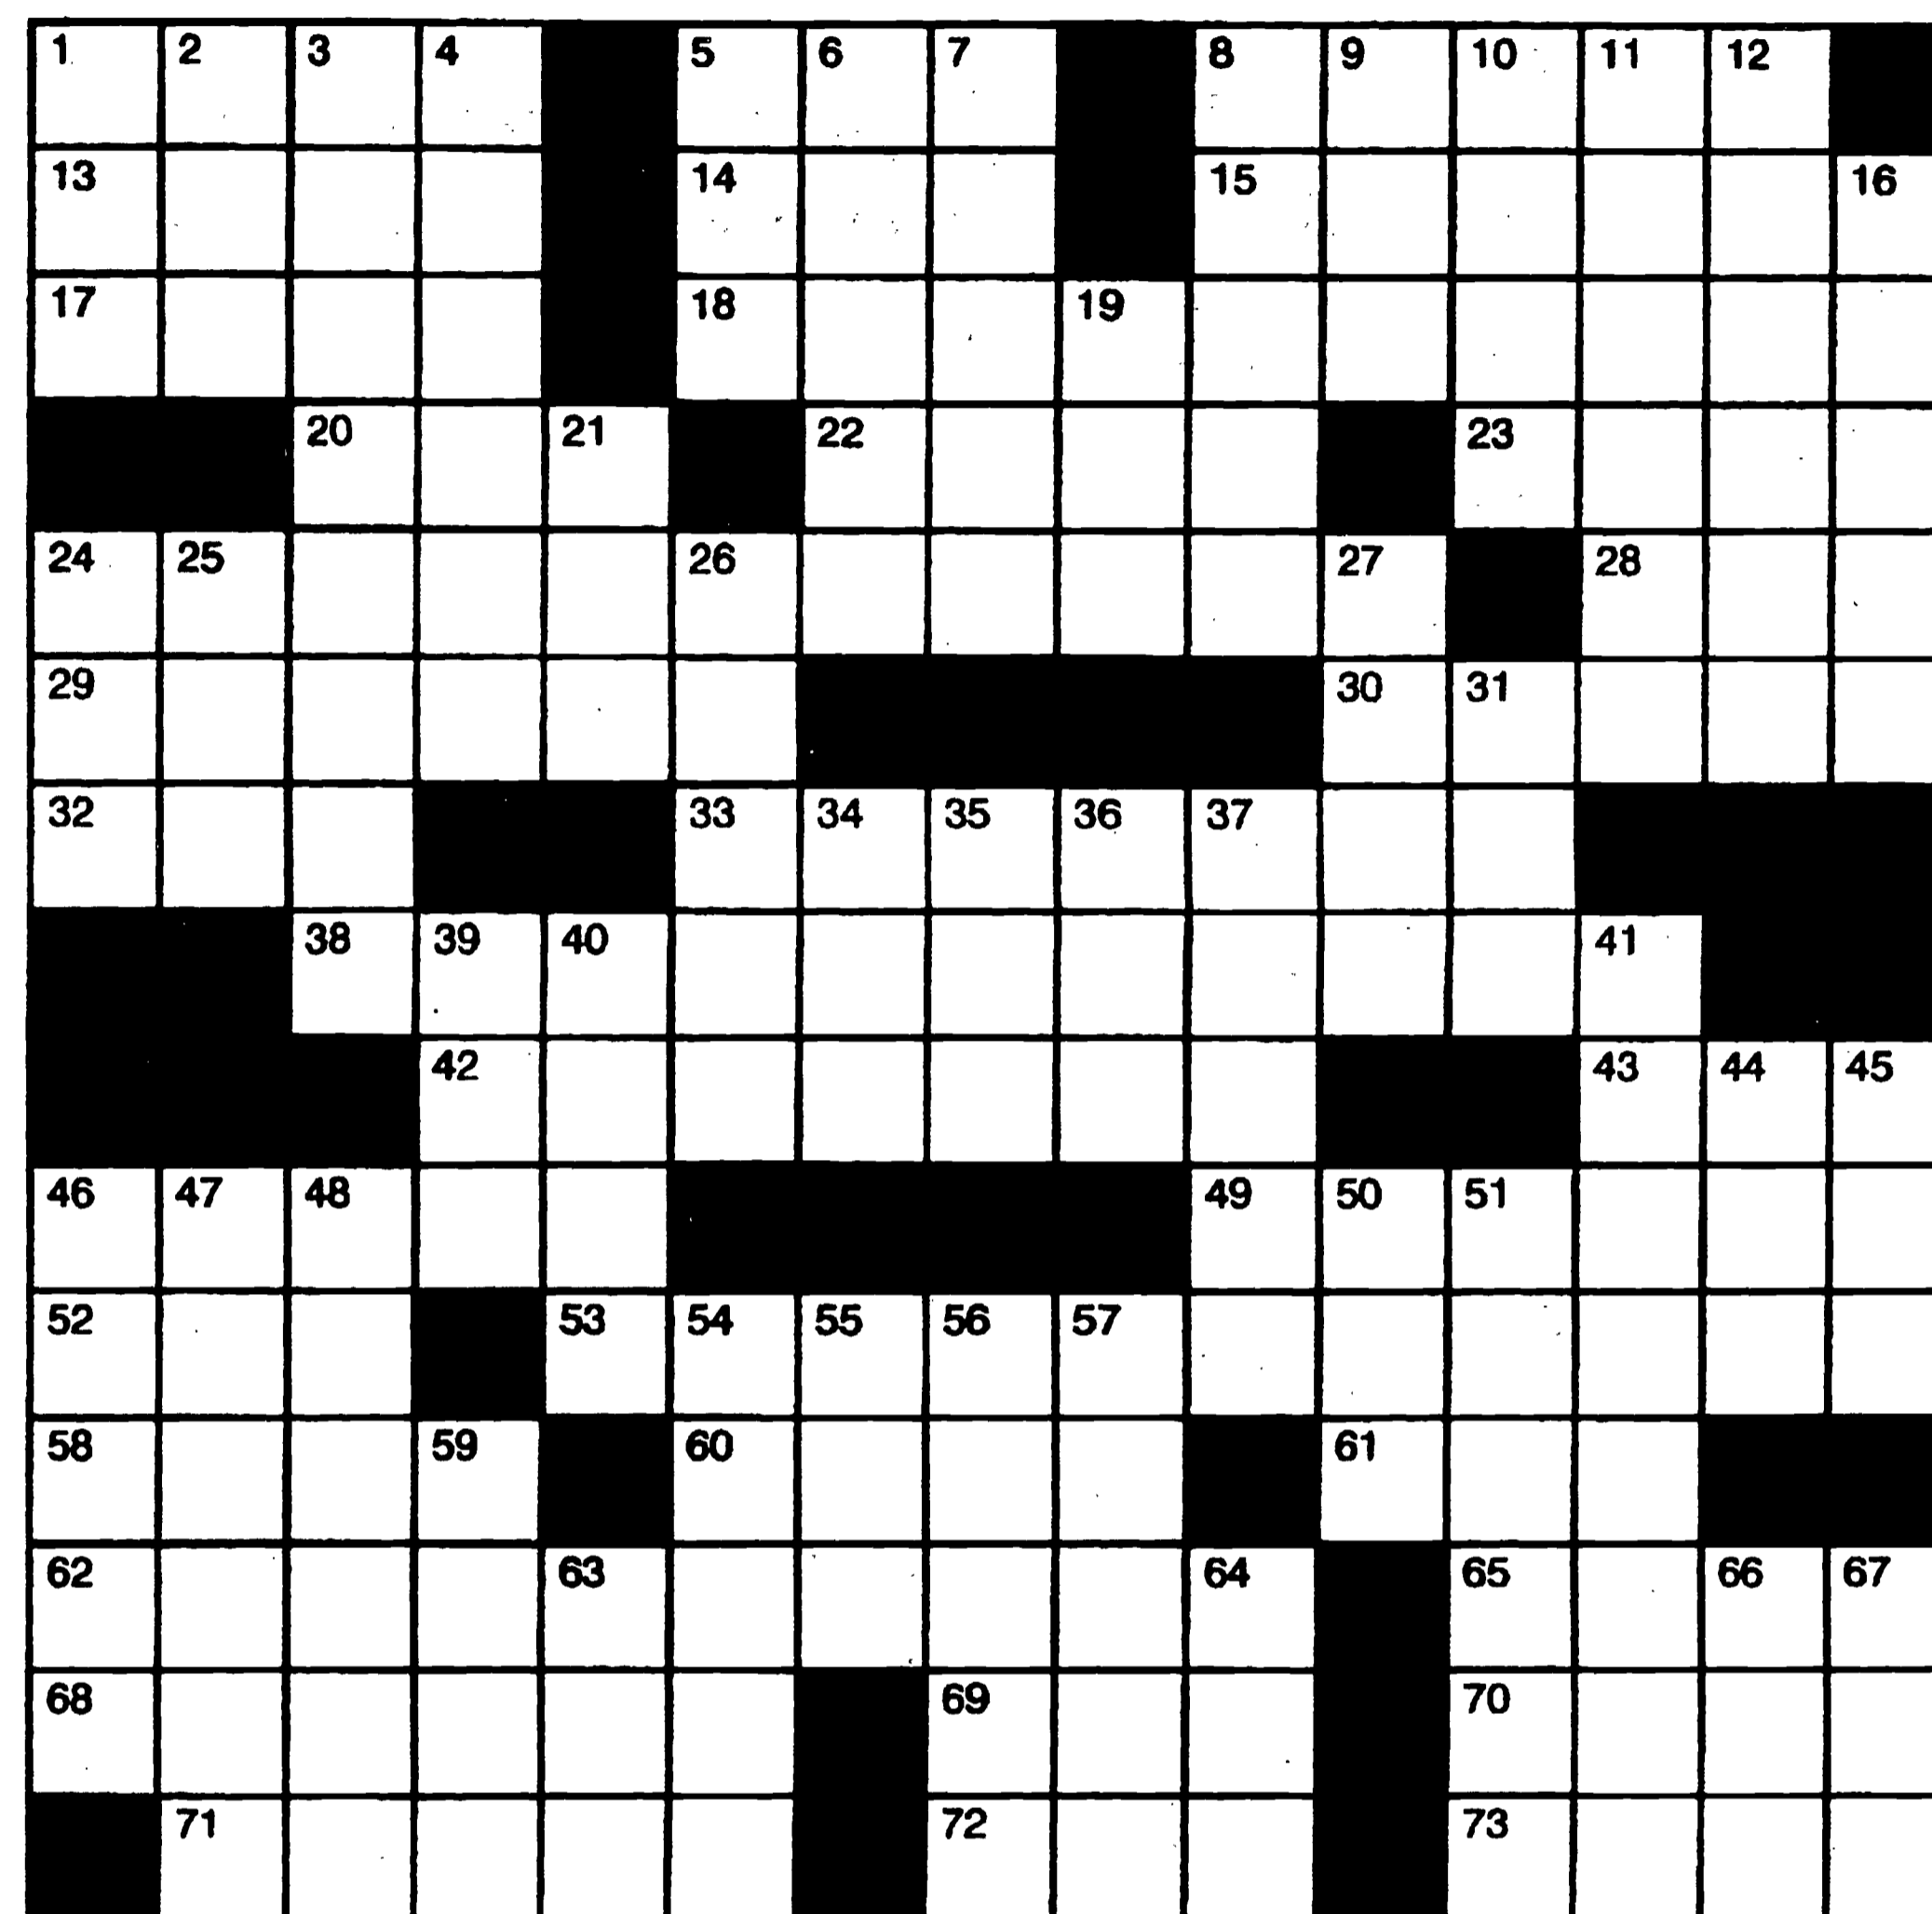

GRILLED RAGU

1 large eggplant
1 tablespoon kosher salt, to taste
1/2 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 teaspoon fresh garlic, minced
1/2 cup red wine
2 teaspoons dried Italian herb blend
2 or 3 firm but ripe tomatoes
2 purple onions
Several sprigs fresh rosemary, soaked in water, tied in a bundle
Juice from 1 lemon
1/3 cup fresh basil, chopped
Salt and pepper, to taste
Yields about 4 cups, serving 4 to 8.
Cut eggplant into 1-inch-thick slices. Arrange slices in single layer on platter or tray. Sprinkle slices with kosher salt. Let stand 10 minutes. Rinse off salt and drain egg-

Prairie View 5K still going strong

BY JEFF BORGARDT
jborgardt@buglenewspapers.com

Runners from near and far have come to relish the annual Morton Grove 5K run.

Now in its 18th year, the dash hosted a record-high 310 participants last month.

Held each year on the second weekend in April, the number of sponsors, runners and walkers continues to increase.

Recreation supervisor Mike Baiardo has been organizing the event for the last three years.

He said the opening gun fires at 8 a.m. and the final walkers usually cross the finish line around 9:15.

A five-kilometer run equals 3.1 miles in length.

Baiardo, who is not a runner himself, estimated a "good time" is about 25 minutes.

Northwestern University graduate student Davey Neville is the makeshift tracks, fastest runner.

He set the course record of 15 minutes and 9 seconds last year. Neville broke his own previous record of 15 minutes and 17 seconds.

"Everyone has a really nice time and we're grateful to all of our sponsors."

makes the dash possible for others.

Since the running path crosses railroad tracks, the event is carefully timed to correspond with the rail schedules.

A train crosses just before 8 a.m. and again around 9.

Participants fork over $17 to join the event. This includes a t-shirt, entry into the race and other perks.

Of the 310 who signed up, 77 chose to walk and the others ran. A sponsor tent included granola bars, bagels, bananas, orange juice and massages from food outlets, sports businesses, a bank and others.

"Everyone has a really nice time," Baiardo said. "And we are grateful to all of our sponsors who help make this event possible."

Baiardo noted that Mother Nature has consistently cooperated with the scheduling for the 5K run and last month was no exception.

"It was just a perfect day," he said. "We have really been lucky with the weather."

Wood Flooring that Works in the Bathroom

BY ROSE BENNETT GILBERT
Copley News Service

Q: We are adding a master bath in what had been the upstairs sleeping porch in our early 1920s Victorian house.

The contractor insists that we install ceramic tile, but the bath opens to the bedroom through an archway - no door - and we have a wood floor in there.

I think tile is pretty but too cold. The contractor says wood will be ruined by water in the bath. What to do?

A: Relax. You can have your wood and your warmth, too, as long as you take reasonable precautions against leaving standing water on the floor. Wood and water are natural enemies, although new finishes - and new wood-look products - have brought them a long way toward peaceful coexistence.

Check out the care and keeping of real wood flooring on the Hardwood Information Center's Web site, www.hard-woodinfo.com.

You will also want to investigate advances in wood look-alikes, such as the laminated floor in the old-fashioned bath we show here. However, there's nothing old-fashioned about the way this flooring (made by Pergo, Inc. www.pergo.com) stands up to modern-day use.

It promises not to yellow, chip or crack, or suffer from spills - clean-up is a wipe with a damp cloth.

A final word about your notion that ceramic tile is "too cold."

While that can actually be an advantage in warm climates, you don't have to live with chilled feet. Borrow an idea from the northern Europeans, who have been installing warming elements under their tile floors for a generation now. Manufacturers such as WarmlyYours Floor Heating Systems (www.warmlyyours.com) offer low-voltage warming grids that go in at the same time you install your new floor. Installation cost is minimal, about $10 a square foot, and can also reduce your overall energy bill - by maybe as much as 40 percent, according to John Fantauzzi, technical director of the Radiant Panel Assn. (www.radiantpanelassociation.org).

Radiant systems can go under all types of flooring materials, including hardwood and laminates, tile, stone, and carpeting.

Q: What's the scoop on "campaign furniture?" My husband has fallen for a desk that stands on X-legs and has brass edges.

A Greener View

Directions For Your New Planter

Jeff Rugg
Copley News Service

Q: The only place in my yard that gets full sun is the garage. Half of it was converted into a guest room. I want to build up the area in front of the guest room with stones for plants. It would be about 10 feet long by 4 feet high and 4 feet wide. Since the bottom will be concrete from the driveway, shall I treat it as a big planter with drainage and new soil every year, or can I just plant perennials and treat it like the rest of the garden?

A: You can treat this flowerbed either way, but it is probably much more economical to leave the soil in it each year. If you build a retaining wall completely around the 10-by-4-foot area and it is 4 feet high, it would hold 160 cubic feet of soil, which is around 5 cubic yards.

First, let's discuss the stone wall. If you need to build a wall that tall for some reason, go ahead and do it, but it won't be necessary for most plants. An 18-inch-to 2-foot tall wall will supply all plants from medium size shrubs on down to annuals with plenty of soil. This height range is also a natural size for use as a sitting wall. Roots need air in the soil and there won't be enough air in the soil 4 feet down for roots to grow well. If the planter must be that tall, you could fill the bottom 2 feet with gravel. Use a weed barrier cloth between the soil and gravel to prevent the soil from eroding and plugging the gravel with dirt.

You can build a three-sided planter if the fourth wall will be the foundation of the structure. Never allow the soil to be higher than the top of the foundation. Moist soil should not be against any siding.

If you are in a climate that freezes, you will want to line the inside of the planter with 1 inch or 2 inches of foam board insulation to protect the plant roots from cold and drying winds. You do not need to add a drainage pipe, layer of gravel or any coarse material at the bottom. Water will naturally reach the concrete and move downhill out from under the walls. Whichever direction the driveway slopes will get a layer of dirty or slippery water flowing over it. It could be stained from the material in the soil. Cutting some grooves in the concrete in a different direction may allow the water to flow where you want it to go.

Fill the planter with good top soil or a mix of soil and lightweight potting soil. If the driveway were raised like a parking garage, then the whole thing should be a lightweight mix. Leave the soil several inches below the top of the wall so that bark mulch can be added without it spilling over the wall. Even after the mulch is

GARDEN TIP

Garden microclimates

Hills and hollows, points of the compass and structures influence garden microclimates. Cold air moves downslope to the lowest point but will collect if its flow is impeded by fences, walls or structures.

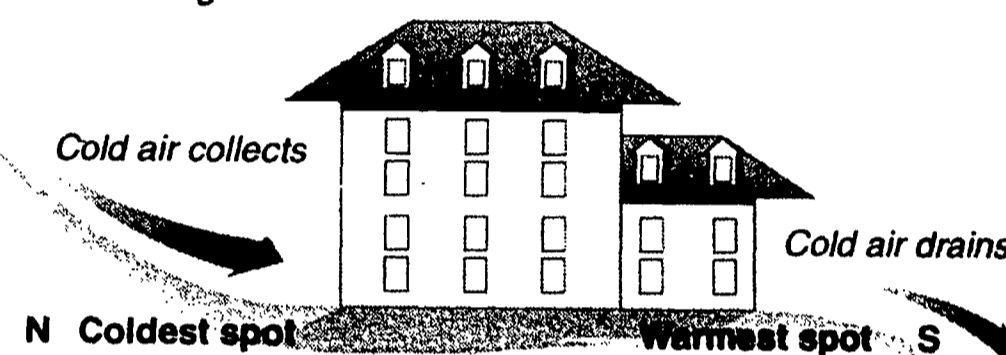

■ South-facing walls absorb heat during the day and radiate it at night, warming nearby plants.

■ A south-facing wall with an overhang is the warmest location. It gives maximum protection against frost.

■ A north-facing wall with an overhang, slope and structure to collect air is the coldest and least desirable for plants.

Spring sun

Copley News Service / Pete Chenard

added, a little more room is needed so that rain can land on top without washing everything over the wall. The bottom 2 feet of a tall planter could be filled with Styrofoam beads to keep it lightweight. If you are going to grow desert plants or succulents, then the mix should be sandy, with some loam for water retention.

Any perennials, annuals, vegetables or small shrubs will do fine in a good soil with such good drainage. It is easy to maintain plants, especially vegetable gardens, in a raised bed. There is less bending over to do for weeding and harvesting. They can even be maintained while seated in a wheelchair. If the bed has access from all sides and is only 4 feet from front to back, the whole area can be reached. You must take into account the front to back thickness of the wall stones to keep the whole bed reachable. Also, some walls need to be wider at the base, so take that into account, too.

You can take out a stone or two in various places around the wall and use these spots as planting pockets. Many perennials spread as vines or ground covers and they can look very nice as they cascade down the wall. Strawberries can also be used.

It is even possible to install a small water garden pond in a raised planter. You can use a pre-formed plastic pond just by sitting it on the concrete and supporting the shelves with stones or bricks. A flexible rubber liner can be used by adding the soil first, then digging and shaping it. Or, by using stones low leaves that fall off. If it happens several times in a row, they will drop flower buds too. They normally will drop leaves at about the time they normally bloom.

Maybe your plant is protected from the cold until it gets really cold. If it were farther from the building, it would have experienced cooler weather before the big drop in temperature. Being next to the warm south wall may also cause the soil to dry out too much.

The store salesman called it that, a "campaign" desk.

We think it's neat and would like to know more.

A: Then launch a safari to your nearest book source and find a copy of "British Campaign Furniture," by New Yorker Nicholas A. Brawer (Harry N. Abrams Inc., publishers).

As Brawer points out, campaign furniture is just what its name implies: furniture that was designed to be folded up and carried on the march by traveling armies.

The idea dates back at least to Julius Caesar, but it was the British gentlemen soldiers-explorers of the 18th and early 19th centuries who made campaign furniture forever stylish.

They commissioned such renowned designers as Chippendale, Hepplewhite and Sheraton to make furniture that allowed them to transport the "civilized life" abroad to India, Africa and to the Boer War - the "last gentlemen's war," as Brawer puts it.

No surprise that not a lot of the originals have survived - the furniture was shot at, dropped off elephant's backs, lost overboard ship - but the good news is that reproductions of the sensible, simply elegant pieces have always been with us. In fact, Stanley Furniture (www.stanleyfurniture.com) has just introduced a collection inspired by campaign originals as part of its new "Barbados" line, a natural since the English took their comforts on Caribbean explorations, too.

Quirky, with its folding legs and secret drawers; handsome, with mahogany and other fine woods bound in brass for endurance's sake, a campaign piece will add an exotic note to any room.
